Eating and drinking

Mallorca is renowned for its Mediterranean dishes with world class restaurants and high quality local produce. Traditional dishes to seek out include, 'arròs brut' -dirty rice- a kind of rice soup, that depending on the season can include snails or rabbit. Vegetarians should try out the simple but delicious tumbet, similar to ratatouille with potatoes, aubergines and red bell peppers.

ROMANTIC \\\ ☎ +34 971 71 50 12

Carrer de Sant Francesc 8, 07004 Barrio Cort (Palma de Mallorca).

Book a table outside at Gastro Bar Can Cera, located in a beautiful converted historical house in one of the prettiest courtyards in the old quarter of Palma. Tapas are particularly good- we loved the acorn-fed Iberian ham- and main courses like octopus with broccoli couscous put a modern twist on traditional dishes. Wash it down with an excellent Mallorcan white but try and save room for the superlative desserts.

LUXURY LUNCH \\\ ☎ +34 971 78 11 19

Paseo Mallorca 20, 07012 Palma de Mallorca.

Adrian Quetglas is a Michelin Star restaurant with a reasonably priced set lunch.

Service is formal but friendly with imaginative and exquisite dishes like a tomato ice cream starter or pumpkin soup with blood sausage. This is amongst the finest of fine dining experiences on the island.

STREET FOOD

Mallorca offers some of the best finger licking street food in all of the Mediterranean islands.

Head to Santa Catalina Market for coca de trampó, a kind of pizza slice- without cheese, but with a delicious topping of roasted red and green peppers, white onions, tomatoes and fresh parsley.

La Pickup is a food truck that serves up great shredded porc negra -local pork sausages- tacos at festivals and fiestas.

Ensaïmadas are traditional sugar-dusted pastries that contain pork lard giving them their distinctive taste. They are served with coffee at street cafes all over the island.

Suggested itinerary

· MALLORCA 7 DAY SAILING YACHT CHARTER ITINERARY ·

PALMA >>> CALA PORTALS VELLS (10nm)

From the marina at Puerto de Palma you will sail to Cala Portals Vells, a place within the Municipio de Calviá which is situated west of Palma. Cala means cove or bay in Spanish so you will see it a lot. In Portals Vells you can explore several spectacular coves close by, the Cala de Mago (an official nudist beach) and Playa del Rei, a bigger beach with fine white sand and clear water for snorkeling.

PORTALS VELLS >>> ANDRATX (13.50nm)

Once you have visited Portals Vells, head to the Puerto de Andratx where you can visit Calas de Llamps, a crescent shaped gem of a bay just around the corner from the port with a stunning mountain landscape as a backdrop for your swim. Less than 2km from the port is Calas de Marmassen a secluded, quiet beach which is also a great place for a swim. It is possible to moor the boat in the leisure marina in Andratx and stay overnight on board. It will be a good opportunity to disembark from the boat and walk around this pleasant, traditional Mallorcan town. Wednesday is market day with fresh local produce. Stop for paella and sangria at Restaurante Sa Societa which has a delightful courtyard.

PORT ANDRATX >>> CABRERA (38nm)

Approximately 38 miles east of the marina in Andratx you will find the Isla de Cabrera. The Cabrera Archipelago is a maritime-terrestrial national park and diving in the Blue Cave here is spectacular.

Before visiting the Isla de Cabrera and anchoring the boat there, you will have to ask for permission from the administration of the park. You can do this online here: <http://bit.ly/2jdgaUs> or on the official Balearic Island Government website (Gobierno de las Islas Baleares) under the section "Cabrera - Fondeo". If there is no space to anchor the boat in the Isla de la Cabrera then 10 miles away there is the Colonial Sant Jordi where there are mooring spaces.

Day 4

ISLA DE CABRERA >>> ES CARBÓ (11nm)

Only 11 nautical miles sailing distance from the marina at Andratx is the Platja d'Es Carbó, a vast stretch of white sand that sits in a protected bay which is approximately one kilometre away from the Colónia de Sant Jordi and opposite the isles of Na Moltona. Near to shore are lots of little islands in the shallows which are fun to explore with kids. Caution needs to be exercised when anchoring your boat here as about 250 metres from the shore there is a depth of only 2.5 metres to a ground of sand and seaweed. It is a tranquil place to spend the night, but bear in mind there are no facilities on this beach.

ES CARBÓ >>> SA RÁPITA (4nm)

Your sailing route will continue to outline the coast over the island until you reach the Sa Rápita marina. The marina here is one of the best on the entire south coast of the island and some of the best beaches, landscapes and seascapes in Mallorca are in this area. A good idea would be to visit the precious 1,400 metre sandbank surrounded by dunes and pines which are found just before arriving at the marina. If you are a water sports fans, and the wind is blowing, you can surf, bodysurf or bodyboard here.

SA RÁPITA >>> CALA PI (6nm)

Cala Pi is a very picturesque beach about 50 meters long with golden sand and turquoise clear water glistening between two tall rocky cliffs covered with pines. The approach from the sea is quite narrow, making for a dramatic arrival between the rocky sides. Swimming and snorkeling here is a real joy, however at certain times of year there are jellyfish. They are big enough to spot in the clear water so easy to avoid.

Day 7

CALA PI >>> PALMA (17.5nm)

After 7 days of enjoying the sea and the stunning coastline of Mallorca it is time to head back to Palma de Mallorca. Make sure you get back in time to spend at least a couple of hours exploring this beautiful town, one of the most charming historical places in all of the Balearic Islands. The Cathedral is a must see of course, get your camera out for the approach to the marina to get a stunning shot of the cathedral from the water.

It is essential that you ask permission to moor the boat in order to be able to spend the night in the park. It will be helpful to plan this beforehand but if you do not find space to dock your boat in the Isla de Cabrera there are also spaces 10 miles away by Colonial Sant Jordi.

ISLA DE CABRERA >>> PORTO PEDRO (19nm)

You will make way to Porto Pedro passing the Parque Natural de Cala Mondragó. If you do not want to enter and moor in the port, another option is to anchor in the southeast in either the Cala d'Els Homos Morts, the Caleta de Sa Torre or in the north on the Sa Platja beach or even a little bit before reaching the port in Cala Mondragó.

PORTO PEDRO >>> PORTO CRISTO (14nm)

A short crossing along the east coast of Mallorca until arriving at Porto Cristo where you can moor in the Club Nautico Porto Cristo or in the Puerto Deportivo Porto Cristo. ## PORTO CRISTO >>> CALA RATJADA (14nm)

Continuing along the east coast of Mallorca, you will pass through the Cala Moraia, the Cala Milor, Port Nou, Son Jordi and the Pinos coast until you reach the Cala Rajada. Once here you can choose between the Puerto Deportivo de Cala Ratjada, managed by the Balearic Islands government, or the Club Náutico Cala Ratjada which is privately managed.

CALA RATJADA >>> ALCUDIA (21nm)

In Port D'Alcudia, you will find a leisure marina with more than 730 moorings for boats and yachts up to 25 metres in length. You can visit the Cueva de Son Sant Martí or the Punta del Patró an area of rocks, pine groves and beaches.

ALCUDIA >>> SÓLLER (42nm)

To complete the whole route, you must sail 42 nautical miles to Alcudia an Marina Tramontana. This section of the journey will take approximately 10 hours and the scenery is spectacular. In Sóller you can find different coves and beaches like Cala Deia, Playa Sa Calobra, Playa de Repic, Playa del Faro or Playa del Través amongst others.

SÓLLER >>> PALMA DE MALLORCA (46nm)

For 46 nautical miles you will cross the western coast of the island, passing through the strait with the Ilsa de Dragonera and you will arrive at the starting point of this intense crossing. If you want to stay a night before arriving at your final destination, you could stay in Cala Fornells.
